Admissions

We seek a diverse student body to bring varying experiences and backgrounds to the classroom. Rutgers Business School –Newark and New Brunswick admits those students who, in the opinion of the Graduate Admissions Committee, show promise of succeeding in the program. Primary consideration is given to the applicant's scholastic record, including the distribution and quality of work, and the GMAT/GRE score. Other considerations include professional work experience, professional appraisals, civic leadership and extracurricular participation, and quality responses on the application form and essay. If application is not complete - for example, missing test scores, no essay or other items missing - you will be contacted by us. If you do not provide a completed application by the listed deadline, we cannot guarantee a decision by the listed date.
